In 2014, the community of Vallarsa, in the Province of Trento, adopted a resolution concerning the regulation of agricultural activities. The community is composed of 15 hectares of vineyards, 300/400 hectares of pastures and other hectares of different intensive cultivations. The resolution has been adopted to promote sustainable agriculture and low impact farming, and it doesn’t necessarily require organic production. Theresolution aims at protecting the environment and mainly citizens since there are numerous studies on the impact of pesticides on residents of areas subjected to frequent application.

According to the resolution, the main problem concerns the quantity and the methods of application of pesticides and fertilizers.